WHEN LOUIE MET BILLY

- 0. WHEN LOUIE MET BILLY Story Preface
- 1. ZAMPERINI and the 1936 OLYMPICS
- 2. LOUIE GOES TO WAR
- 3. ZAMP and HIS SUPER MAN B-24
- 4. B-24s IN COMBAT
- 5. SUPER MAN ATTACKS FUNAFUTI and NAURU
- 6. A GREEN HORNET and GREY SHARKS
- 7. KWAJALEIN EXECUTION ISLAND
- 8. PRISON CAMPS OFUNA and OMORI
- 9. NAOETSU and CAMP B-4
- 10. THE BIRD THEN AND LATER

11. WHEN LOUIE MET BILLY

12. FORGIVENESS

Louie Zamperini's life changed after he met Billy Graham. This image, online via The Billy Graham Evangelistic Association of Canada, depicts the two together while both were younger men.

After the war, Zamp was reunited with his family. On the surface, everything seemed normal - until something upset Louie. Then his long-building frustrations came to the surface, shocking those who loved him.

Adjusting to civilian life was difficult. He still despised the Bird and was motivated by one overriding ambition. He wanted to return to Japan and finish what he'd hoped to accomplish there. He wanted to kill the Bird.

Although he read his Coming Home pamphlet, Louie didn't really pay attention. It described his symptoms, but he ignored them. He couldn't get all the bad war memories out of his head. He had nightmares, couldn't concentrate, tossed and turned all night and ... was afraid. Could he still run? Earn a living? Kill the Bird?

Sometimes, during his bad dreams, he choked the Bird to death. Then he woke up, worried about choking someone else. What if he did it unwittingly? What if he did it to someone he loved?

In March of 1946, Louie took advantage of the government's offer to give returning vets two weeks of rest and relaxation at one of four resorts. In a life-changing decision, Zamp selected Miami Beach.

Visiting the Macfadden-Deauville Club, he saw a beautiful young girl named Cynthia Applewhite. From a wealthy family, Cynthia was younger than Louie. Her parents were unimpressed when they met the former POW and discouraged their daughter's obvious interest in him.

Cynthia disagreed with her parents and married Louie on May 25, 1946. Deeply in love, the couple had money at the start. With $10,000 in back pay (from his POW years) and $1,600 of life-insurance proceeds (which he was allowed to keep), Louie invested in various ventures. When they failed, and the money ran out, his moods darkened and the nightmares worsened.

In 1949, after the birth of their daughter, Cynthia Battle Zamperini - Cissy for short - Louie seemed content, but he was still out-of-control. When Cissy cried, he got upset. He wondered whether he was he failing his child.

One night, during a particularly bad nightmare, Louie woke up to find his hands around Cynthia's throat. It was time, she said, to end their marriage.

Cynthia didn't go through with a divorce, but she wanted to make changes in her life. In September, of 1949, she learned about a young preacher named Billy Graham. He'd come to LA, from Minneapolis, setting up a huge tent at the corner of Hill and Washington Streets.

Planning to hold a revival meeting for a few weeks, Graham and his team paid attention to the packed crowds and agreed to stay longer. Cynthia wanted to check out what was going on inside the tent.

Trying, unsuccessfully, to convince her husband to attend a meeting with her, Cynthia went alone. That night, after Louie returned from a night of too much drinking - which he often did - his wife seemed very different. He wondered why:

Oh, Louie. You know how I always say there's something missing in our lives? Now I know what it is. For the first time I have peace in my heart.

Cynthia had listened to Billy Graham and decided he was right. She'd become a Christian.

For days thereafter, she pleaded with her husband to hear Graham, but Louie refused. Giving in one night, he listened but left early. What did any of that stuff have to do with him?

As his nightmares worsened, he kept seeing the Bird. During the day, Cynthia kept begging him to return to the tent:

I brooded and ignored Cynthia's almost constant urging to return to the tent that night. But she wouldn't give up. After arguing for hours, I agreed to go back, under one condition. When that fellow says "every head bowed and every eye closed," we're getting out of there. (Zamperini, Devil at My Heels, page 240.)

Zamp returned to the tent, fully planning to leave at the predetermined time. Then, he heard Billy say these words:

What kind of life are you living? Are you satisfied with your life?

Louie reacted to Dr. Graham's words:

Just then, my whole rotten sinful life passed before my eyes and I began to get an inkling of what I feared I had to do. Only I didn't want to do it. Why? Men prefer darkness to light. How could I give up the parties and the liquor and living for the moment and the fun? (Devil at My Heels, page 241.)

Zamp grabbed Cynthia's hand and told her they were leaving. When he got to the aisle, something made him change his mind:

...I got to the aisle. I stepped onto the sawdust path and knew it was my crossroads of decision. I fought against it, perhaps harder than I'd ever fought, but in the end I made my decision, turned right, toward Billy Graham, released Cynthia's hand ... (Devil at My Heels, page 242.)

When Louie met Billy, he decided to put his life on a different path.

See Alignments to State and Common Core standards for this story online at:

http://www.awesomestories.com/asset/AcademicAlignment/WHEN-LOUIE-MET-BILLY-Unbroken-Louis-Zamperini-St

See Learning Tasks for this story online at:

http://www.awesomestories.com/asset/AcademicActivities/WHEN-LOUIE-MET-BILLY-Unbroken-Louis-Zamperini-Story

Questions 2 Ponder

Is Post Traumatic Stress Syndrome a Likely Side Effect of War?

After the war, American soldiers returned to the States with a pamphlet called "Coming Home." Among other things, it describes symptoms which the traumatized soldiers might have after they returned to their families.

Today, we use the words Post Traumatic Stress Syndrome (or Disorder) to describe such a condition.

Louis Zamperini had the symptoms of Post Traumatic Stress Disorder, after he returned home, but he disregarded them. He did not seek help until his symptoms worsened dramatically.

Do you think that Post Traumatic Stress Syndrome is a likely side effect of war? Why, or why not?

How likely is it that someone who has been traumatized, such as soldiers enduring the endless tragedy of war, might resist getting treatment for their symptoms? Explain your answer.

Do you think that people living in war zones, but not fighting as soldiers, equally face the potential of developing Post Traumatic Stress Disorder? If so, what can be done to help them?

Media Stream

Billy Graham in LA 1947

View this asset at: http://www.awesomestories.com/asset/view/

Louis Zamperini - Reunited with His Family

Reunion of the Zamperini family, following Louie's return from Japan, online courtesy Louis Zamperini.

View this asset at:

http://www.awesomestories.com/asset/view/Louis-Zamperini-Reunited-with-His-Family

Macfadden-Deauville Club

Vintage postcard of the Macfadden-Deauville Club, at Miami Beach, online courtesy CardCow.com.

View this asset at: http://www.awesomestories.com/asset/view/Macfadden-Deauville-Club

Cynthia Applewhite - Wife of Louis Zamperini

Image of Cynthia Applewhite, online courtesy Louie Zamperini.

View this asset at:

http://www.awesomestories.com/asset/view/Cynthia-Applewhite-Wife-of-Louis-Zamperini

Louis Zamperini in 1949

Image of Louis Zamperini, in October of 1949, online courtesy Billy Graham Center at Wheaten College.

View this asset at: http://www.awesomestories.com/asset/view/Louis-Zamperini-in-1949

WHEN LOUIE MET BILLY

View this asset at: http://www.awesomestories.com/asset/view/

Billy Graham - 1949 Los Angeles Tent Meeting

Video clip from a documentary on the 1949 LA Tent Meeting - by Grace Productions - online, via YouTube.

View this asset at:

http://www.awesomestories.com/asset/view/Billy-Graham-1949-Los-Angeles-Tent-Meeting